Chinese white dolphin

Since the Chinese white dolphin was chosen as the mascot of Hong Kong' reunification with her Motherland in 1997, people's awareness and interest in this lovely animal has much increased. Indeed, having been living in the waters of Pearl River Estuary for centuries, these dolphins are true indigenous, though non-human, residents of Hong Kong. Like their human counterparts, Chinese white dolphins are experiencing degradation of living conditions as a result of urbanization and coastal development taking place over the years. To ensure these spectacular dolphins will survive in our waters as our welcomed neighbours, all of us should work together to care for the environment, cherish our finite marine resources and strive to protect the Chinese white dolphin and other precious marine creatures.

"2010 Guangdong - Hong Kong - Macao Chinese White Dolphin Drawing Competition" aims at encouraging students, youngsters and the public to express, through their artistic talent and creativity, their feelings towards the Chinese white dolphin. The competition would certainly promote conservation of dolphins and the marine environment and help encourage more people to support and participate in this challenging but meaningful task.
